

Shot Him To Put Him Out Of His Misery
Killed Stray Dog

The Hugo Husonian July 13, 1911 - transcribed by Ron Henson

Wednesday afternoon about 2:30 Allen Foshee shot and killed an old stray dog down near the Frisco depot. The old dog had been kicked and cuffed about until he was all out of patience with humanity, and took a notion to exterminate the race. He started in by trying to bite a boy, and a cook in a restaurant took a whack at him with a butcher knife. He struck the dog on the ear, nearly severing it from his head. Mr. Foshee saw the dog and shot him to put him out of his misery.
